For the Scioto Gazette. In Memory of Col. Elmer Ellsworth. Hest, youthful patriot, rest is sleep;

Nor heavy trend of soldier's feet.
Shall wake thee from thy sacred sleeping. We mourn thy loss; above thy bler, Wisn, great souled patriots have been singing They held thy young life all too dear,

No sound of fife, or war-drams heating.

Thy aged parent's mournful tears, Fall for their precious son and only; "The hope of their declining years,"

And thou art gone, and they are lovely. Still'd, still'd, thy fond betrothed knows well, Is thy young brave heart's ardent beating; And broke is low amystic spell,

And parting sail, for joyous mosting. Thou hadet but one life to lay down;

And that was given for thy Compley, And brightfor age the martyr's crown, Martyred for right and liberty. Then, why mourn that thy life is o'er, That in this world fondties dissever!

Since thou art gone unto that shore Where life and love remain forever. Sleep on, thou youthful martyr; sleep!
